Hi Lisa

Sorry about the delay in getting back to you.

Ed is comfortable for me to write this speech for the Chancellor if it's possible to have some time with Julie to get her thoughts on the questions provided by YNSS.

If time with Julie is not possible, we can engage

Subject: Invitation to the Chancellor: YNSS Keynote

Dear Chris,

It was a pleasure to speak to you on the phone yesterday. Thank you in advance for facilitating the passage of this invitation.

As explained, we would be delighted to invite Julie Bishop to participate as a Keynote Speaker in the program line up for the inaugural Youth National Security Strategy (YNSS).

I have included further information about the YNSS and the envisaged role for you and the Chancellor's awareness.

What is the YNSS?

Over the last few months, YNSS organisers have been selecting 42 of Australia's brightest emerging leaders, out of a competitive pool of 621 applicants hailing from every State and Territory.

From September to December, in a process culminating in a weeklong symposium at the Australian National University, our forty-two representatives will co-author Australia's first youth-led national security strategy. The ensuing document will put forward the next generation's innovative solutions to emerging national security threats, such as disinformation, ransomware attacks, public health crises and food security.

Currently, the YNSS counts Kiah Consulting as its Principal Industry Partner and ANU as its Principal Academic Partner, with support from ANU's Strategic and Defence Studies Centre, National Security College, and Crawford School of Public Policy, alongside various Colleges.

The YNSS is also supported by an expert advisory board, which includes Richard Maude, Georgie Skipper, Gai Brodtmann, Stan Grant, Jessica Mackenzie, John Glenn, and Simone Pensko.

What are we asking of the Chancellor?

We are delighted to invite Julie Bishop to be the keynote speaker in the YNSS' 'Alliances, Partnerships, and Multilateralism' week, held via Zoom on September 14 (6:30 to 8pm; or for the Chancellor, 6:30 to 7pm).

As the Keynote Speaker, the Chancellor would commence the (private) Zoom meeting with a 20 or so minute address to the full cohort of our Representatives (as well as the expert facilitators who'll subsequently lead the Working Groups that everyone breaks out into after her address). At the end of her keynote address, and max 3 Q&A questions from our Reps, she would be free to leave the call. It is a roughly 30-minute total engagement.

The Chancellor's role as Keynote Speaker would be to give a brief address that stimulates the thinking of the Representatives about that week's topic. In the 'Alliances, Partnerships, and Multilateralism' week, we are asking the Representatives to contemplate how Australia should strengthen or adapt existing alliances, consolidate new partnerships, and contribute to the strengthening and evolution of the international rules-based system. The aim of the Chancellor's address would be to help shape how our Representatives go on to think about and grapple with these questions, ultimately feeding into the strategy document they co-author.

For the Chancellor's awareness, Rory Medcalf, Michael Wesley, and Evelyn Goh are the other confirmed/invited keynote speakers in the surrounding weeks of the program line up.

Why support the YNSS?

Ultimately, the initiative promises to sharpen the thinking, skills, and networks of an emerging cohort of young leaders in national security. Crucially, it will also break ground in bringing a diverse and unheard set of voices to the table, helping recalibrate the conversation surrounding Australia's national security landscape. Your participation as a keynote speaker would help inform the co-authors to make the most considered contribution to Australia's policy debate, maximising the potential for the strategy document to have a transformative impact. Finally, all contributions from experts in their relevant fields will be acknowledged in the final document for their support and time given to the YNSS and its Representatives.

RSVP

If the Chancellor or someone on her behalf would be so kind as to accept (or unfortunately decline) this invitation by responding to this email ASAP, that would be much appreciated. We will be in touch to provide more information, including a Zoom link, should the Chancellor accept.

For more information, please visit our website: <https://www.ynss.org>. Should you have any queries or concerns at all, please don't hesitate to contact me via email.

Warm regards,

Dom Dwyer
