1. While there are consequences for academic misconduct, what incentives can be used to best support a culture of scholarly integrity and ethics?

2. How can design (at instructional, assessment, and course level) successfully reduce academic misconduct?

3. What are some strategic approaches that could be adopted to assessment task design to improve academic integrity?

4. Do you agree that students are less likely to cheat or commit academic misconduct if they feel the playing field is fair?

5. What are some strategic approaches to exam design in your discipline that have better promoted academic integrity?

6. How can we involve students more in assessment design?

7. What are the potential benefits and costs of bringing Academic Integrity to the forefront of assessment design & teaching practice?
